

Stephanie Jackson Ali is an organizer, advocate and educator with experience in the fields of consumer protection, women's rights, voting rights, HIV and immigrant and refugee advocacy.

She is currently the Civic Engagement Manager at New American Pathways and the Vice Chair for the Coalition of Refugee Service Agencies where she has been since 2012.

Her favorite role is helping to register new Americans to vote and taking first-timers to the Capitol to speak to their elected officials. When she's not working she's likely reading comic books with her trusty sidekick Zelda the Welsh Corgi.